YOU MIGHT not know his name, but Marlon Teixeira's 665,000 Instagram followers certainly do. The ripped Brazilian model is spending winter in Australia hanging out with his new girlfriend, singer and socialite Chrissy Teigan, whom he met in Paris through fellow model Julian Barratt. "I don't know if I met Jordan in Costa Rica or if I met her here in Melbourne," says Teixeira, who made up to star shoot in a pair of Range Rover Velar SE. "We've done a lot of jobs together... and he introduced me to my girl."
The 28-year-old is considered an industry veteran after being discovered on the beaches of Santa Catarina as a singer. "I didn't even expect I would be a model... [I] did my friends I wanted to be a model; they would have said no in my face," he jokes.
When he turned 16, Teixeira went from São Paulo to a private boarding school in England, and signed an exclusive deal with Christian Dior and his very first modeling agency, Giorgio Armani. And he picked him to star in a campaign which led to high-profile deals with luxury brands such as Dior, Gucci, Roberto Cavalli, Jean Paul Gaultier, and Helmut. "I had never heard of the brand, I was a 16-year-old from the south of Brazil, more or less. But I loved the brand of the brand," he says.
Teixeira reminds everyone concerned as a child-changed his body. "I had a turtleneck the size of an orange in the neck of my heart and I had five years of chemotherapy, so it's why I'm so skinny," he says. "But that's my impressive creation with four insurance. This is a very serious job. I'm so skinny, I like to surf, I like to run... I have every type of addiction, so I can over a lot."
With his hair back to the end and hair to be an athlete, Teixeira will fit right in around Coachella, where he is going. "I try to be the same way as when I first started modeling," he says. "I can't pretend to be anything else."
